After 20 years, East Troy Community Band Director Jay Huenink is saying goodbye.

Jay led the East Troy Community Band during a farewell Thursday Nights on the Square concert in front of a full house at East Troy Village Square Park July 28.

He addressed the crowd at the end of the show and thanked the members of his band.

"The last 20 years have been amazing. It's been my honor and privilege to make music with these musicians," Jay said.

many people whose dedication and generosity has enabled the band to continue for two decades, including his wife Heidi who ran the business side of the band.

After weekly performances helped the Hueninks lead East Troy's music community for the past 20 years, Jay said he knew it was time to retire the director moniker.

"When Heidi and I started the band in 2002, we wouldn't have dreamed the band would become what it is today. Thank you to the East Troy community for supporting us and thank you to the musicians past and present for the honor of making music together," Jay said.

While Jay stands in a class of his own for the lasting impact he's made on countless musicians and music fans, part of his legacy will be his early view of East Troy Village Square Park as a crown jewel and the way he saw the park as part of his central vision for

There was a bittersweet symphony July 28 as beloved band director Jay Huenink conducted the East Troy Community Band in his last concert. Huenink said he's loved directing the band on Thursday Nights on the Square in the summer with early shows being played in the bandstand.

"There wasn't a lot going on at the park at the time. We picked every Thursday night at 7:30 p.m. so people would get in the habit of knowing there would always be a group there," Jay said.

As the Hueninks close their Thursday Nights chapter, it appears they have built a tradition so strong it will continue.

"The band will play on," Jay said.

He explained his departure isn't the end for the organization as the East Troy Community Band Board of Directors is already working to find a new director with plans to return the Thursday Night concert series in summer of 2023.

"I'm really looking forward to seeing how the band goes in future years and how it will continue to be a part of summers in East Troy," Jay said.

A Class of Their Own

After a run of two decades, the Hueninks discussed how unforgettable playing with the band has been.

"I love doing it. I couldn't wait for Thursday Nights," Jay said.

"The challenge is to choose the best music the musicians can play and that will be loved by our audience," said Jay of the way he organized each show.

He said he often picked a few songs that bands love to play such as marches, classics, overtures and show tunes mixed in with popular music and guest bands for the audience.

Some of the biggest highlights for Jay were taking the entire band on a trip to Mackinac Island in 2008, hearing a band member present The Gettysburg Address, as well as getting the chance to perform under the direction of longtime East Troy High School Band Director Ivan TeLindert.

For about a decade, the band got to perform on stage at Alpine Valley Music Theatre.

But the band had to work for its success.

The Hueninks, who fell in love at the UW-Oshkosh Music Department and later served in an Army Band, planted roots in East Troy in 1996.

Jay, who first started playing his horn in fifth grade and went on to be both a dedicated band member and a college level discus thrower, pursued a career in the IT field. However, Jay held onto fond memories of playing with his community band since he was 15 in Oconomowoc.

"We went all over the country and I played with people of all ages," Jay said of his inspiration for starting an East Troy group.

Huenink founded the community band with just a handful of musicians, building the program from scratch.

"We had four people show up to the first rehearsal and three people hadn't played in 15 years," Jay explained.

Luckily, there was a decent sized audience at the first concert, but the Hueninks still worked hard to grow the series by involving East Troy's music community, including Rodger and the late Cathy Trader and Tim Hummel from the East Troy Community School District's music program with support from village officials such as Linnea Loesch and John Alexander.

"It took a village with involvement from all different kinds of people," Heidi said.

In the early years, Alpine Valley Music Theatre donated money to help the non-profit group buy its first equipment.

By year four, about 40 musicians played in front of a solid crowd on the square.

"We were pleasantly surprised at our audience sizes. Kiwanis Manor began bussing in groups, and each year each concert grew more popular," Heidi explained.

The band remained steady through the years with between 30 and 45 members.

Heidi said she loved how the tight-knit band included all walks of life from doctors to nurses to students to grocery store managers to engineers.

"We've met a lot of neat people we never would have met," said Heidi.

Heidi is currently working to have Jay's influence be forever marked at East Troy Village Square Park with a commemorative bench.

1 Strumpet and Tart

2920 Main St., East Troy

By Vanessa Lenz
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR
EAST TROY CHAMBER

A new stylish shop has opened in East Troy's downtown, featuring a rotating selection of new, vintage and vintage-inspired home décor and furniture.

Strumpet and Tart has become the latest addition to the bustling East Troy Village Square, opening its doors during the Fourth of July Weekend.

The business, which provides a new and personally curated shopping experience, is run by Lis Friemoth and Vicki McKone who said it was important for them to open on the developing square.

"Every time somebody does something cool here on the square, I love that it encourages more creativity," McKone said.

The longtime East Troy locals said they thought of the idea for the business while across the street on the rooftop of Chinuk Sushi & Grill & el Pedro Taco (recently opened by McKone and her husband Jeff).

"We looked down at the building and thought it could be really cool and it just kind of evolved," said McKone, who is also an educator.

"It was always the goal to be complementary to what is already existing in town," said Friemoth. "We wanted to support what is already here. Let's all work together to serve people coming into town and have fun."

Friemoth, best known for her business The Garden Hoe, is a horticulture specialist, popular consultant and well-known plant whisperer, and has played a major role in creating the shop's vibrant atmosphere.

The store vibes are bohemian-chic, global-inspired, edgy and retro all in one, featuring new floor to ceiling windows and an exposed ceiling with original molding.

It also includes one of the most beautiful bathrooms you've ever seen with outstanding light fixtures, artwork and spa inspired hand towels.

"It really truly has been a group effort where family members and friends have been involved in sending us ideas for things that could come into the store and also helping a lot with design and visualizing the space," Friemoth said.

All Things Intriguing & Inspiring

Strumpet and Tart offers a curated selection of goods that will give you design inspiration for any room of your home, including items sourced directly from Turkey thanks to a new friendship Friemoth made while researching artisans.

Whether you're in the market for a statement-making sofa or hoping to splurge on a regal mirror or warm up the most minimalist of rooms with an authentic Turkish rug, Strumpet and Tart has you covered.

Friemoth and McKone said they created the shop for those looking to find the perfect standout piece to bring new life to a space or the fab new item that you might plan a room around.

Friemoth said they are happy to offer "weird, unique statement pieces that will really pizzazz a room."

"These are pieces that have some history or if they don't have history, they have the potential to have history," Friemoth said.

Such items include the "Strumpet Sofa," which belonged to the family that sold the farm property that now houses Mayfair Mall, carts from Allen-Bradley that are repurposed, an original untouched Sputnik chandelier and more.

"All of the pieces that we've purchased kind of speak to one of us or all of us that are curating the pieces," Friemoth said.

From Choco coffee and chocolate to original pennant designs to Egyptian glass, it's also worth exploring the store for the perfect gift.

Friemoth and McKone said it's been important for them to support local artisans as well as ethical and sustainable goods.

The store's walls are adorned with art and photography by local artists.

A selection of coffee and chocolate is all produced in Athens, Georgia, from bean to bag and bean to bar.

"What we do when sourcing items, is ask about where things come from because we want to make sure people aren't being taken advantage of," Friemoth said.

Friemoth and McKone said they will continue to work with various artisans to provide the ultimate selection to their customers.

They also aim to offer a relaxing shopping experience, offering spaces to lounge, samples and one-on-one assistance.

"Our biggest compliment is when people come in and ask, 'Can I just stay here?'" Friemoth said.

With a constant change of inventory, McKone reminds shoppers to come back and shop often.

"We have people come in multiple times a week, because things change," Friemoth.

Summer hours are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., Wed.-Sun.

Shoppers can book private appointments anytime by calling (262) 745-2904.

InkLink Books, known for hosting bestselling authors at its Read & Feed book dinners and virtual events, captures the nostalgia of the best independent bookstores by filling its shelves with books from hyper-curated lists. The result is an impressive variety – hard to find titles, literary fiction, political works, cookbooks, titles on science and nature, children's books and more are all there. While owner Kayleen Rohrer is an expert on what to read and can guide you through the shelves, she wants the selection process to be more about discovery.

"My preference is for people to do the hunt," Rohrer explained. "A lot happens when you do that. It's inevitable that you find something you didn't know was out there. It's exciting." The building, which dates back to 1862 has been completely transformed into a chic yet comfortable space filled with beloved titles of every genre. As you enter, you are surrounded by floor to ceiling books, a rolling ladder, fireplace and attractive window displays. Murals of goddesses of wisdom adorn the walls and ceiling. Open Tues.-Sat. from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.
